The sun has been inactive for most of April, with nothing of B-class or greater until the 24th. A C2.8 flare late on the night of the 24th was after sunset for us, but the B6.3 flare on the 27th was better timed. There were numerous small B-class events from the same active region through the rest of the month.